Cyber Security and Safety

With the increase in remote work, we rely on numerous devices and our ability to connect to the Internet for work and personal reasons. However, cyber threat actors take advantage of our reliance on technology. Protect yourself by taking stock of all the technology you use, including your mobile and smart devices, computers, and Wi-Fi networks.

By knowing what you have, you can prioritize your security efforts and put the right safeguards in place. You can find our complete catalogue of our products and services on our website (cyber.gc.ca) or laptop and therefore are more vulnerable to threat actors.

Getting familiar with your privacy settings on your devices, ensuring you use unique and complex passphrases or passwords, and using multifactor authentication on your accounts are steps you can take to take to defend against potential cyberattacks. (Canadian Centre for Cyber Security, 2024).
